

Street Art · Mark Jenkins · Book · 20 January 2012

Mark Jenkins Exhibition in Berlin

Gestalten presented the first solo show in Germany by the renowned American artist Mark Jenkins, who uses ordinary packing tape to create life-size human or animal forms. Here are some photos...

By Jan Brennenstuhl · 4 photographs

As I already told you, the first Mark Jenkins exhibition opened its doors yesterday presented by Gestalten!

The famous street sculptor showed not just photos of his popular works, but also included new Jenkins sculptures made in Berlin. Furthermore, Gestalten used the artist's Berlin residence to publish his first monograph The Urban Theater: Mark Jenkins.

> In addition to Mark Jenkins's sculptural work, Glazed Paradise includes photographs of select installations that reveal how compelling the interaction between his artwork and its environment can be. (Gestalten)

For those who couldn't make it, here is what you've missed: free drinks, a Q&A talk with Mark Jenkins himself and a nice atmosphere - But hey, of course I took some photos. Here you go:

Artist

Mark Jenkins

Place

Berlin

Techniques

Art Installation, Sculpture

Formats

Book, Exhibition

Section

Street Art

Also as

Markdown · JSON